

Class of Users:

Our class of users are high school and college students. This class likes to not only listen to music, but also read news about specific artists and newly released singles and albums. Furthermore, these students like to read album reviews and blog articles about their favorite artists. Ideally, the users would like all of this information to be displayed neatly on an artist page and would like to manage a group of their favorite artists.

Personas:

1. Jamie is a college student studying Environmental Engineering. She likes to listen to music while she's going to class and while working on her problem sets. During her down time, she enjoys keeping tabs on all her favorite artists, especially Future Islands.
2. Rafa is a journalist student focusing on covering music. He uses many different web sources, but he has yet to find one site that can provide all his music-related news needs. He uses many news/blog articles and album reviews for his own writing but wants to spend less time searching on search engines.

Use Cases:

1. Jaime wants to add Future Islands to her artists. She clicks the "My Artists" tabs on the menu bar. She searches for Future Islands, and a list of search results show below. She finds Future Islands and click the plus button next to their name. She sees that Future Islands has been added to the list in the subnav bar.
2. Rafa is writing an article about Slightly Stoopid and wants to find a some articles and reviews on the band. On the home page, he searches for Slightly Stoopid and looks through the search results. He reads one summary and clicks on the link to the page where it was written.
